If there was a chance for me to lay beside you in the mornings, I'd take it and hold you tightly, like you might leave me if I let you get up from bed

I'd whisper "good morning" as you grumble in your half-asleep state, caressing tangles out
of your locks
and kiss your forehead longingly into the daylight.